Total Number of Prizes for this County, 250.

CAUTION—No Tag will be received before January 1st, 1904, nor after February 1st, 1904. Every package containing tags must be marked plainly with Name of Sender, Town, County, State, and Number of Tag in each package. All charges on packages must be prepaid.

HEAD—SPEAR HEAD possesses more qualities of intrinsic value than any other puff tobacco produced. It is the sweetest, the longest, the richest. SPEAR HEAD is the only puff tobacco that is guaranteed to be pure and free from any of the deleterious ingredients that are found in the cheap puff tobaccos. A trial will convince the most skeptical of this fact. It is the largest seller of any puff tobacco in the world, and its popularity is attested by the fact that it has won the highest honors and prizes at all the great international exhibitions. # THE MAN WHO NEVER SWEARS.

I've often wondered how he feels, When trouble comes his way, When everything goes wrong, and clouds Obscure his sunny day, For instance, when a good old friend Takes off the title he wears, I wonder what he thinks about, The man that never swears.

Or when to make a business trip He hastens through the rain, And gates the station just in time To take the morning train, How does he feel as he goes, The express disappearing, I wonder if he thinks of words, The man that never swears.

The world is full of trying scenes, No matter where we go, The truly good are tempted sore, As you, perhaps, may know, And when I find him vexed and mad, My sympathy he shares, For I imagine how he feels, The man that never swears.

A BROKEN ENGAGEMENT.

He was a clever-looking, gentlemanly man to whom one of the porters at the Great Northern Terminal was touching his hat so respectfully; for was not Mr. Kenrick the skillful, patient surgeon to whom he owed his recovery, after one of those terrible accidents which the most prudent of the railway officials cannot always escape?

She was a tall, dark girl, carrying her head more haughty erect, as soon as she perceived that Mr. Kenrick was waiting for her.

Half an hour ago that proud young head had been drooping sorrowfully; that now coldly-impassive face had been hidden behind her veil in a burst of passionate weeping.

They had loved each other so fondly! They had dreamed such charming dreams of spending the rest of their lives together, and now—

But as soon as their eyes met she bowed, and languidly murmured a "how do?" as if to the merest acquaintance; and he, though grinning with teeth with a chilling indifference, contrived to emulate it.

Not another word was passed between them as she led the way into an empty waiting-room, and placed upon the table the small leather bag she was carrying.

This she proceeded to open; but now her face betrayed her emotions, her gloves must be unbuttoned and pulled off; and then, as she sought on her key-ring for the tiny implement that unlocked the bag, her agitation betrayed itself yet more palpably in her trembling hands.

Aware of this she mumbled something about the frosty weather having numbed her fingers, and walked to the fire, where she could turn her back upon him until she had fought with and conquered her emotion.

"And he stands by, stern and grim, unyielding and unforgetting," she exclaimed, mentally. "If he had ever really loved me, could he have let me go thus? Oh, fool, weak fool that I am, to let our parting pain break my heart!"

She went back to where he stood leaning against the table, with his gaze fixed on the bag, and as soon as she felt sure that her voice was not unsteady, proceeded to address him:

"I would not have troubled you, Mr. Kenrick, to meet me as I passed through London, if I had not discovered, while packing your presents, that there was a couple of pearls missing in the necklace which you valued because it had been your mother's. My sister avers that they must have fallen out before you gave it to me."

"Mrs. Derwent is right," he interposed; "I meant to have them replaced, but forgot."

"Thank you. Then I return the necklace in the same condition that I got it. In this box you will find your letters—"

"Could you not have burned them?" he demanded, his chest heaving. "Do you think I shall care to possess such galling reminders of a time when I was credulous enough to believe there was truth in woman?"

"You are insulting, sir!" was the indignant reply. "You sought a pretext for breaking an engagement that worried you. My sister found that pretext, shame for your own injustice should keep you silent in my presence."

"I have never been unjust to you, Agnes, never!" he declared, his tones hoarse with excitement. "As soon as it was hinted to me that you were playing the coquette with half-a-dozen fellows whom you had in your chains, I wrote to you frankly and affectionately telling you what I had heard, and how one simple 'it is not true' from you would suffice to convince me that you were slandered."

"And I sent you that assurance, although it vexed me to the soul to find you so ready to listen when others maligned me."

"You sent me that assurance," he repeated; "but when I begged you to confirm it, did you do so?"

"You mean that I declined to take back the promise I had given my old school-fellow of staying with her a month ere I left the north. It was ungenerous to ask it of me."

"But you know why I was so persistent. Though I could not accompany you to Durham, to spend Christmas with your relatives, I stifled my reluctance to part with you, till you proposed to lengthen the term of your absence by going to Mrs. Fortley's. Can you deny that she was not the sort of person with whom any thoughtful man would care for his betrothed to be so intimate?"

Agnes Lenton gave an impatient sigh.

"I am not inclined to fight Belle

The Ohio Chemical Co. Gentlemen—Some time ago I sent for Blue worth of your Tablets for Tobacco Habit. I received them all right, and although I was a heavy smoker and chower, they did the work in less than three days. I am cured.

MATTHEW JOHNSON, P. O. Box 45, PITTSBURGH, PA.

The Ohio Chemical Co. Gentlemen—I have been using your cure for tobacco habit, and found it would do what you claimed for it. I used ten cents worth of the strongest chewing tobacco a day, and from one to four packages of Blue worth of your Tablets cured me in less than ten days. I have cured and cured for twenty years. All of which is guaranteed to you. I have cured and cured for twenty years. All of which is guaranteed to you.
